Hello, World

This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about. This is filler text because I don't know what to write about.

Introduction:

The goal of this assignment was to test our knowledge of CSS. We were told to design a webpage that was visually appealing and used advanced techniques of CSS.

Narrative:

I liked this assignment because it allowed me to use the CSS that I had looked at online. I like the ability to make almost whatever I want. I know I am not extremely advanced in CSS, and I don't think my page is top notch, but I feel like my skills are advancing as far as CSS goes. I didn't have a whole lot of problems with this project because nearly everything I did was online.

Reflection:

This project was not too hard and I feel like I learned a lot from this project. I was able to set a background that was not rectangular, I was able to add a dotted border around the "Hello World" text. I really like website design because it is a mix of programming and design. These two things have always interested me, so this fits to my liking very well.